60-year-old disabled man burns to death in a shack fire

A 60-year-old disabled man burnt to death in his back yard shack situated along Mnandi Street near Siyahhlala squatter camp in Dunoon.

The blaze that razed to the ground 10 back yard shacks and gutted one upgraded RDP house, left approximately 50 people including mothers and children destitute and homeless.

Confirming the tragedy, City's Fire and Rescue Services spokesperson Liezl Moodie, said one adult male died as a result of fatal burn wounds and the cause of the fire is undertermined.

The fire started after 1am on Saturday, April 22.

At the site on Saturday morning, fire victims were seen sifting through charred shack material debris trying to recover building material they could use to reconstruct their homes.

Mother of three children Nondumiso Tyebise, 32, said she lost all her belongings to the fire including ID's and children birth certificates.

"I am angry and heart broken. We lost everything including children school uniform and text books,"said Tyebise.

Loyiso Sondlo, 29, was at work when the fire started.

He returned home to find his fathers upgraded RDP house gutted. He was only remaining with the clothes he wore.

"Fortunately I was not home when the fire started. We lost literally everything. We lost belongings almost to the value of R70 000. I am devastated especially that someone lost his life. It is sad,"said Sondlo. One of the deceased man neighbour Andile Mahlalaba, said the fire spread so quickly that they were unable to save the deceased.

"I screamed for help so we could rescue my neighbour but we couldnt. The fire was so fierce and spread so fast," said Mahlalaba.

The deceased man daughter Chriszelda Jambey came to the site and stood next to the plot of his late father shack. Police had cordoned it off with a yellow tape. She appeared distraught.

She said she was heart broken that her father was dead.

"My father is gone," she cried. Silulo Ulutho Technologies donated mattresses to the fire victims.

High cost of a hearing problem

NIELEN DE KLERK

Having a hearing problem is expensive. And a deaf woman from Tyger Valley is on a mission to inform the world just how much of a burden this is.

Jody Bell (24) wants to use the Miss Deaf SA (MDSA) 2017 pageant as a platform to tell people about the soaring costs that hearing-impaired people have to deal with throughout their lives.

Bell, one of 12 finalists in this year's competition, was born with profound hearing loss – a problem only diagnosed when she was one year old.

"My grandmother thought something was wrong," she says. It was only when they read about hearing loss in a magazine that her family realised she may be deaf.

General hearing tests for babies are much more common these days, she says.

Jody grew up in Edgemead and now works as a research assistant at Tygerberg Hospital while completing her master's studies.

Growing up with hearing loss meant she had to overcome numerous challenges.

She was the only person with hearing loss or any type of disability in the various schools she attended.

She was often socially excluded or even bullied.

Having to live with one form of hearing aid or another for most of her life, Jody is more than aware of the price tag attached to hearing.

She received her first cochlear implant in 2009 in an operation costing R300 000.

"I mean, who can afford that?" she asks.

Her school helped to raise money for the implant, but upgrades are needed every three years and cost between R100 000 and R200 000.

The batteries for her implant alone cost R6 000. She is fortunate, she says, as she has support systems in place, but many deaf people aren't that lucky.

"If I were to win, my focus would be on the financial issues and costs surrounding hearing loss, from assistive devices to support, medical aid, insurance, cochlear implants and more," she explains on her fundraising website for Miss Deaf SA.

The winner of Miss Deaf SA will be announced during "An African Dream Night" gala evening on 15 September at the State Theatre in Pretoria.

Finalists are given various tasks to compete – including fundraising.

They are also expected to create and wear a traditional African headpiece on the gala night.

The one thing Bell wants people without a hearing problem to know is that being deaf does not make one stupid.

"I wish people weren't so afraid to ask about a disability. If you want to know how you should talk to me, just ask. Don't assume"

Bell is passionate about helping other deaf people, and she occasionally gives talks at support groups. She recently met a young girl who didn't want to get a cochlear implant, but was inspired by Bell's talk to give it a go. This really touched her.

"I always say come with the good, the bad and a solution," she says.

"If I win, it'll bring me in contact with people I haven't spoken to before."

This bigger network will help her make more of a difference, she believes.

"It would be nice to win, but it's not as important as making a difference."

■ Anyone wishing to donate towards Jody's cause can contact her at jodylebell@gmail.com.

■ To vote for Jody to win the Public Choice Award, SMS "MDS 06" to 47439 (R3 per SMS).

■ New offices under development at Century City

New offices for Discovery

STAFF REPORTER

A new development of 16 300m² of office space, which will include Discovery's new regional headquarters, is to be built at Century City.

Being developed by the Rabie Property Group at a cost of R460 million, Sable Park will comprise two four-storey buildings of 8 000m² and 8 300m². Each block has two levels of underground parking and will face Sable Road, says Rabie director Colin Anderson

Discovery's Cape Town staff, who will be relocating from elsewhere at Century City due to their existing lease expiring, will occupy the larger building.

David Pierre-Eugene, head of group facilities at Discovery, said: "As part of our assessment for new premises, we surveyed other developments outside of Century City and found that from a location, convenience and amenities point of view, Century City was still the best location to meet our requirements."

Sable Park is situated in the Bridgeways precinct, which is home to a number of other blue-chip companies including the new Absa regional offices, Chevron, Philip Morris, the Business Centre, and the Rabie Property Group among others.

Also located in the precinct is the mixed-use Century City Square, which comprises the Century City Conference Centre and Hotel, 15 000m² of offices, 51 apartments and five restaurants, pubs and coffee shops surrounding a public square and served by 1 330 parking bays.

Rob Heaney, Parklands

The view from Blaauwberg beach, overlooking Table Bay and on to Table Mountain, is truly beautiful. And, apart from a few hulking cargo ships and some high rise buildings in the city centre, that view hasn't changed since Jan van Riebeeck pull into the bay all those centuries ago.

But just like the Huguenots couldn't take it with them, neither can we.

The view doesn't belong to anyone. Although we like to think it does.

I feel for the Burgers, it is a bit of a k*k one, but if someone builds in front of yours, there's not much you can do about it ("Neighbours fight over room with no view", Tabletalk April 19).

Especially when they went the legal route like Mr Brown did.

You make mention of how the renovations don't consider the original plans of the "complex".

The word "complex" is thrown around a lot, but Mill Row is clearly in a "free standing" situation.

Nice thing with free standing is there are no complex levies to pay.

In the complex where I live, there is a body corporate, everyone pays their monthly levies and there are a whole bunch of rules set in place so that you can't even erect a satellite dish.

No alterations are allowed to the complex and if there ever are, the whole complex has to be on board.

It's a bit restrictive, but the nice thing is, I'm guaranteed that nobody's gonna build a great big brick wall up in front of my view.

Barnardo wants to bring about 'real change'

■ PETER LATEGAN

Meeet Gregchan Barnardo, Proportionate Councillor for the DA in the City of Cape Town Administration. Born and bred in Mitchells Plain left him with a good and thorough understanding of the socio-economic challenges generally associated with an area like that.

Abject poverty, gangsterism, crime, unemployment, alcohol & drug abuse was, and to a great extent still is, the order of the day in an area like that. Growing up with limited means and resources, coupled with first-hand experiences of the legacies of apartheid, would ultimately lead him to his current role in the political arena. His first job was at a book publishing company in 2000 and three years later he enrolled at the University of the Western Cape where he studied Sport & Exercise Science. In 2006 he was employed at the City of Cape Town's Safety & Security Directorate, with other jobs in between.

In 2016 he entered the world of politics, formally, but already started getting actively involved in politics in 2009. "My motivation was my passion for people, service delivery and mostly bringing about real change. As PR councillor for the Democratic Alliance (DA), my duties entail representing the party in various executive structures, DA Caucus and management. As councillors we are subjected to government legislation, and we should therefore have a thorough understanding of the council's functions, structures, roles and powers. For this purpose he decided to up-skill himself and is currently studying towards a qualification in Public Administration and Management at UNISA. Referring to the recently established sub-council, Barnardo believes that the most important job of a sub-council is to bring local government closer to its people. I believe it can do this by organising public participation processes for the City's policies and legislation, such as by-laws and the Integrated Development Plan; compiling and monitoring capital and operational spending of Ward Allocations and making recommendations to the Council on matters affecting that area. When asked what he considers the three biggest challenges for this Sub-Council 1 and Atlantis in particular Barnardo says that the lack of capacity is a big concern. There are still too many departments and individuals who work in silos. Proper and genuine community involvement is another challenge that we need to address," he reckons.

Tell us in brief about your family:

I'm the eldest of six children, my mother is a qualified educator for 37 years and my father has been working at PRASA for 40 years. I am currently married, living with my wife and two kids. We are expecting another child, due later this year.

What did you want to become as a little boy?

Sport Scientist. I just love sport.

What is the one thing you can't survive with on a daily basis?

A cup of good coffee like Douw Egberts or Jacobs Kronung

Do you prefer Facebook, Linked in or Twitter and why?

I'm on Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn. I personally believe that social media helps to validate your brand, it communicates and delivers an offering that have value to customers as well as connect you to your audience.

What is favourite dish?

Eastern cuisine, seafood and other traditional food.

What is the best advice you ever received?

What you visualize you can materialize. What you think about you can bring about.

Who had the most profound influence on your life and in what way?

Well, without a doubt my parents, because they played the role of a mentor, leader, facilitator and director.

Please share the most inspiring quote ever heard?

Dr Martin Luther King Jr. once said: "The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy."

BID TO INTERDICT MBALULA

Ex-Hawks boss turns to court again

Siyabonga Mkhwanazi

BERNING Ntlemeza's lawyer Comfort Ngidi will approach the court today to interdict Police Minister Fikile Mbalula from preventing his client from executing his duties as head of the Hawks.

This followed Ngidi's insistence that the axed Ntlemeza was still entitled to his job at the Hawks until the Supreme Court of Appeal had ruled on the matter.

Ngidi said the high court's decision in Pretoria to axe Ntlemeza would not apply because his appeal in the Supreme Court of Appeal was pending.

However, he wanted Ntlemeza to remain in the job.

"I have already instructed the advocate to prepare papers. By the end of business tomorrow the process will be clearer," he said.

The stand-off would further damage the image of the Hawks

Ngidi would not say if Ntlemeza was paying the legal costs from his own pocket.

He said he was more focused on justice being served for his client, than on the issue of who was footing the bill.

Mbalula's spokesperson Vuyo Mhaga confirmed that the State was not covering Ntlemeza's legal costs.

Mhaga said Ntlemeza was paying the legal fees from his own pocket.

Meanwhile, an analyst warned that the stand-off between Ntlemeza and Mbalula would further damage the credibility of the Hawks.

Professor Roger Southall, of the University of the Witwatersrand, said the unit's image was already damaged over its poor prosecution record in the recent past.

The parliamentary portfolio

"I think its credibility is fragile because we know from the statistics the number of prosecutions is lower than the Scorpions," said Southall.

The Ntlemeza affair had added to the woes of the Hawks, he said, and it would be difficult for the unit to recover from this dispute.

The committee on police yesterday called on Ntlemeza to respect the judgments of the courts.

Chairman of the committee Francois Beukman said Ntlemeza could not be a law unto himself.

Beukman said Ntlemeza must respect that decision of the court and the fact that Yolisa Matakata was now the acting head of the Hawks.

Beukman also said he would look at the request of the DA for an urgent meeting of the committee to deal with the Ntlemeza matter.

The DA has proposed that an inquiry be conducted into the fitness of Ntlemeza to hold office.

This would be done in tandem with the court appeal by Ntlemeza.

DA MP and spokesperson on police Zakhele Mbhele said the inquiry would set the record straight. The committee had the power to act in matters of this nature, and it would have to act urgently, he said.

The pupils were travelling from Refano Primary School and the nearby Mahlenga Secondary School to their homes in Wolvenkop and Verena when tragedy struck.

Yesterday, Gauteng Education MEC Panyaza Lesufi visited the school, where he told pupils and family members that it would take up to a week for DNA tests to be conducted and the charred remains of the deceased to be identified.

Basic Education Minister Angie Motshekga and Mpumalanga MEC for Community Safety Pat Ngomane were part of the visiting government delegation.

Lesufi said 14 pupils who died in the crash were from Refano Primary School and four were from Mahlenga Secondary School.

He said two pupils had since been discharged from hospital.

"We are here to formally break the sad news to our learners," said Lesufi.

As the MEC related details of the horror crash, more and more children broke down into tears.

Emergency services workers, nurses and social workers were on hand to comfort the children.

"We want to help you. The social workers will be with you."

"The police have taken over the crime (accident) scene. Let us treat everyone equally, including the family of the driver."

Lesufi said only one body had been positively identified so far.

At Mahlenga Secondary School, things were much calmer – the learners were sad but composed.

Grade 11 pupil John Mduli said he was saddened by the deaths of his schoolmates.

"I still can't believe they are gone. I wish there was something that could have been done to prevent that accident," the boy said.

Earlier yesterday morning, the government delegation visited Mahlenga Secondary School.

Charges against Motsoeneng 'may be illegal'

Luyolo Mkentane and George Matlala

DEFIANT former SABC chief operations officer Hlaudi Motsoeneng may dodge the new charges put to him by the corporation's interim board – on a technicality.

Motsoeneng has once again thrown the gauntlet to the broadcaster's new board, saying the process they followed to try and summarily dismiss him was illegal.

His position is backed labour analyst Michael Bagraim, who argues that it was illegal for the SABC to write to Motsoeneng, calling for him to motivate why he should not be "summarily dismissed". This after Motsoeneng called a media briefing where he verbally attacked the interim board and Parliament's ad hoc committee, which looked into the corporation's affairs.

"They can't dismiss him without a hearing. That's old-style government, we live in a new era where people have labour rights. It's illegal for them to have written that letter in the first place. That's not the way it's done. It doesn't matter how bad you think someone has behaved, you still subject him to a disciplinary hearing. If they think he did wrong while on suspension they must invite him to a hearing, call witnesses and give him enough time to prepare for a hearing," said Bagraim.

On Friday, the SABC interim board slapped Motsoeneng – who was in hospital at the time – with a letter asking him to explain why he should not be summarily fired for his comments during a press conference last week.

He was given until 4pm yesterday to reply.

Yesterday, Motsoeneng's lawyer Zola Majavu, confirmed that his client had met the deadline but refused to comment on the contents of both the letters to his client and his reply to the SABC.

"I confirm that we received a letter. The letter said he must respond by 16h00 and we did. Out of respect for the SABC I don't want to talk about it until they acknowledge receipt," he said.

But Independent Media has independently established that Motsoeneng argues that he could not be summarily kicked out for what he said at the press briefing without a proper procedure during which he will be able to defend himself.

Motsoeneng's defence, a source said, will be similar to that of the eight SABC journalists who were last year reinstated by the Labour Court after the broadcaster fired them without following procedure for voicing their concerns about the banning of protest visuals.

Our sister paper, The Sunday Independent, reported on Sunday that Motsoeneng had been served with fresh disciplinary charges.

"Motsoeneng has been served with charges and will face a disciplinary hearing for negative publicity. He can be summarily dismissed," a source familiar with the case said.

In a no-holds-barred media briefing in Johannesburg last week, Motsoeneng tore into the interim board, chaired by businesswoman Khanyisile Kweyama, saying it was conflicted and lacked integrity.

Motsoeneng called for the SABC board to be appointed by ordinary citizens and not Parliament and that it should be chaired by a retired judge.

SABC spokesperson Kaizer Kganyago said they did not want to discuss the matter in public.

"As we have said before, we don't want to communicate with our employees through the media. That's how we want to get involved."

"If anyone has got issues

it will be the person we have written to."

Kweyama couldn't be reached for comment.

The former SABC strongman appears to be on his own after Communications Minister Ayanda Dlodlo dismissed his criticism of the board, saying it was legally appointed by President Jacob Zuma and that she would give it her full support.

Motsoeneng alleged the board was never vetted and that Krish Naidoo should not have been appointed to serve on it. Naidoo and Vusi Mavuso resigned as board members in Parliament in October.

Lamoer, co-accused face 109 criminal charges

Chevon Booysen

THE Western Cape High Court heard yesterday that former provincial police commissioner Arno Lamoer and four other co-accused face 109 criminal charges of corruption, racketeering, buying firearms and ammunition illegally, and money laundering involving R1.6 million.

State advocate Billy Downer said Lamoer and his co-accused – business owner Saleem Dawjee and three brigadiers, Darius van der Ross, Kollin Govender and his wife Sharon Govender – are accused of taking money and expensive gifts from Dawjee in exchange for special treatment.

Downer quoted the Prevention and Combating of Corrupt Activities Act saying that the "mere offer of gratification is the same crime as receiving or giving gratification."

Lamoer pleaded not guilty to all the charges brought against him, adding in his plea explanation, presented by defence lawyer Grant Smith, that Dawjee and he had been friends for "well over two decades".

"I may venture to suggest that he is in fact my best friend and that our relationship had grown through the hardships and successes we have both encountered in our personal, business and family lives."

Lamoer said his prosecution by the State "contains an element of ulterior motive" suggesting that he is being "witch-hunted".

ARNO LAMOER

He admitted that he received money from Dawjee but justified that by saying the deposits received included a "wedding gift" to his daughter.

"(It was) merely received on her behalf and in a manner exercising logistical convenience."

"At the time he did not have my daughter's banking details and arranged for the funds to be deposited into my account," Lamoer stated.

According to Lamoer, he was "somewhat surprised" by the deposit made into his account by Dawjee.

"I believe (Dawjee) at the time did not have my daughter's banking particulars and arranged for the funds to be deposited into my account," Lamoer said.

Lamoer added that clothing accounts were paid on his behalf by Dawjee from his credit card, but said the money was paid back as Dawjee needed cash on the day.

Lamoer denied having done any favours to any person while holding office as lieutenant general in the police service.

The case continues today.

AIC pressures ANC into Matatiele return to KZN

Tebogo Monama

THE ANC has capitulated to threats by the African Independent Congress (AIC) that it will withdraw from its governing coalition with the party in Ekurhuleni and Rustenburg if Matatiele municipality is not reincorporated with KwaZulu-Natal.

Yesterday, the AIC and the ANC signed a memorandum of understanding to start the process of putting in motion the moving of Matatiele from the Eastern Cape to KZN.

The AIC helped the ANC retain the Ekurhuleni and Rustenburg municipalities following last year's hotly contested municipal elections.

The ANC lost control of Tshwane, the City of Joburg, Umkhanyakude District Municipality and Nelson Mandela Bay in the elections.

Earlier this year, it emerged that the AIC wanted to pull out of the coalition if the ANC did not deliver on its promise to move the municipality.

Party helped the ANC to win elections in Ekurhuleni and Rustenburg

"The ANC will, by the beginning of next month, put the motion in the National Assembly. To complete the incorporation, legislation has to be changed. We hope that the process will be wrapped up by the end of the year," the memorandum said.

AIC spokesperson Aubrey Mhlongo said they did not expect a lot of resistance from other parties in Parliament.

"We can't speculate on that, but the other parties also have members in Matatiele who want to go back to KZN."

"They have a mandate from them, and they have to fulfil that."

UN condemns DRC showing video of killings

Reuters

KINSHASA: The UN says it is horrified by a video screened by the government of Democratic Republic of Congo that appeared to show the brutal killing of two UN investigators.

Congo's government showed the film to reporters in Kinshasa on Monday, saying it showed members of an anti-government militia carrying out the act.

Government spokesperson Lambert Mende did not explain how authorities obtained the video, but said they were showing it to rebut suggestions that Congo authorities were complicit in the killings.

The pair, from the US and Sweden, went missing on March 12 on a mission to the Kasai Central province where rebels have intensified an anti-government insurgency that has left dozens dead on both sides. Their bodies were found later last month.

"Our colleagues in the DRC have seen the video and we are utterly horrified at what appears to be the killing of Michael Sharp and Zeida Catalan," said UN human rights spokesperson Ravina Shamdasani.

The UN is carrying out its own investigation into the killings and has urged Congo to do so as well.

The video appeared to show the two experts walking with a group of men wearing red headbands characteristic of the local Kamuina Nsapu militia, according to a Reuters reporter present.

Since July, when the militia first launched an uprising, the UN estimates at least 400 people have been killed.

The film, narrated by a Congolese police spokesperson, cuts mid-way through and the two are seen sitting on the ground and then shot. Catalan is subsequently beheaded.

Mende said it was filmed by the Kamuina Nsapu militia and had been secured by police.

"Our police and soldiers are accused of being implicated in the assassination of the two UN experts. That is not the case."

The government also presented another video including images showing a large group of beheaded bodies wearing police uniforms that authorities say were also victims of militia violence.

Congo's government is under pressure to investigate the violence in Kasai, where the UN says it has found a total of 40 mass grave sites it says may need to be probed by the International Criminal Court if the government fails to.

Several Congolese officials close to President Joseph Kabila are subject to Western sanctions for police brutality, allegations which Congo regularly denies.

Tensions with the West are also high due to criticism of Kabila, whose mandate to rule the country of 70 million people expired last December.
